

Sociotechnical Synthesis

There is no connection between the Capstone Technical Report and Science, Technology, and Society Thesis.

The Capstone Technical Report is on a product that focuses on usage from the general populace, focusing more on continued use of technology in general, rather than how they use the technology. This Capstone, by focusing on using mechanical energy for electrical device usage, has separated itself from how technology's growth has affected the flow of information. Even more specifically, the two are separated in that Connective Action, the main framework for the STS thesis, relies upon social mediums such as messaging each other or posting forums, while the capstone relies on the device itself and the power/charge it holds.

Due to this, there is no connection between the two documents.
